JAPAN BEGINS AGGRESSIVE POLICY IN CHINA

REPRISALS AGAINST THE NATIONALIST ARMY

2,000 JAPANESE TROOPS REPORTED IN THE TSINAN AREA

JAPANESE LOSSES THERE ARE 50 KILLED AND 100 WOUNDED

Tokio, May 7.—(UP)—Japanese troops now in the vicinity of Tsinan, China, probably will drop their defensive attitude for an aggressive policy beginning today, official advisers here said.

The aggressive policy probably will be in the form of reprisals against the nationalist army with whom the Japanese have been fighting for the past few days.

There are 2,000 Japanese troops in the Tsinan area.

Reports here said that the Japanese losses in Tsinan were not more than 50 killed. One hundred were said to have been wounded.

The position of the Japanese troops, however, continues grave. Fears were felt that the nationalists might make a rush on the zone now protected by the Japanese. The nationalists would be able to place many more men in action than the small Japanese force protecting the foreign settlement.

All British and American residents in Tsinan, according to unverified reports, are safe.

Six armored airplanes have left Pingyang for Tsing Tao.

London, May 7.—Newspaper dispatches from Peking today said that representatives of various warring Chinese factions had opened negotiations with a view of establishing a united front against Japan.

Washington, May 7.—Considerable uncertainty was apparent in official quarters here today as to immediate consequences of the clash between Chinese and Japanese troops at Tsinan.

While the hope was expressed that Japan would not undertake reprisals, as reported in dispatches from Tokio, it was said the United States for the present will adopt a watchful waiting role in the belief that the serious situation created by the battle at Tsinan will eventually adjust itself.

Ambassador MacGeagh at Tokio is closely studying developments in the Japanese capital. He has received no new instructions and probably will be given none unless the Japanese indicate they will take action which may conflict with American policy in China.

In any event, it was suggested, the United States will under no conditions join with Japan in a military movement to "enforce" peace in Shantung province.

It was reiterated that the government's only immediate interest lies in affording protection to American lives and property in Shantung. If it becomes necessary to dispatch troops into the province for this purpose, however, troops will be sent without hesitation, it was said.

A message from Minister MacMurray at Peking said news from Tsinan was still fragmentary and that he had had no direct word from Consul Price since April 27.

So far as is known in Washington no efforts are being made by Price and the British consul in Tsinan to mediate in the controversy between the Chinese nationalists and the Japanese.

A cablegram from W. R. Dorsey, American consul at Tsingtao, said that a foreigner had arrived by Japanese military train with mail from Consul Price. This was taken to show that communications with Tsinan had been re-established and that more complete reports of what had occurred there in the last few days soon would be available. Dorsey's message said up to 6 o'clock yesterday morning, Chinese time, it was believed no American in Tsinan had been injured and no American property looted.

BAND

NO AMERICAN CASUALTIES, RESULT OF MARINE FIRE UNKNOWN

Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, May 7.—(UP)—United States marines today are reported advancing along the Waspook river district after an engagement with a small rebel band. The battle occurred Friday night. Reports here said that there had been no marine casualties and the result of the marine fire was unknown.

A marine detachment under command of Captain Edson was proceeding through the Pis Pis area by way of the Waspook river. An advance guard of eight rebels appeared suddenly and opened fire on the marines. The marines made a counter attack and soon there was a vigorous engagement under way. Captain Edson had about 60 men in his group. The rebels were estimated to have had a force of 40.

The rebels finally withdrew and the marines continued their advance.

RUSSIA IN A NOTE TO POLAND

PROTESTS AGAINST "PASSIVE"
ATTITUDE OF POLAND AGAINST
RUSSIAN ROYALISTS

By FREDERICK KUH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Berlin, May 7.—(UP)—A Russian note to Poland, delivered at Warsaw today, charged that a young Russian who shot twice at the Soviet trade representative there intended to assassinate Russian Minister Bogumoloff.

The note protested against the "passive" attitude of the Polish government toward Russian royalists refusing there.

It said that the Russian government would reserve the "right to further action" unless the present situation was altered.

The Russian note advanced the theory that the young Russian, Emiore Wojciechowski, who shot at Soviet Trade Commissioner Lizarieff as the commissioner was driving through a busy Warsaw street, really was trying to kill Russian Minister Bogumoloff.

Bogumoloff, the note said, daily passed the spot where the attempt occurred at the same time as Wojciechowski fired at Lizarieff's car.

It was complained that after the assassination of Russian Minister Volkoff on June 11, 1927, Russia notified the Polish foreign office that Wojciechowski was an active agent of a Russian anti-Soviet organization. The Polish government denied this.

A few days later, the note said, Russia handed the Polish foreign office a list of names of alleged anti-Soviet agents. Wojciechowski's name it was alleged, was on the list.

Battle to Save Saluda River Valley From Flood Destruction at Critical Stage Today

BIG PARADE OF PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

BEGINS BEFORE SENATE COMMITTEE PROBING CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

8 OF 14 CANDIDATES OF BOTH PARTIES CALLED FOR OPENING OF SESSION

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, May 7.—The big parade of presidential candidates began today before the senate committee investigating campaign expenditures.

Although the ears of Washington politicians were tuned to hear the all-important result of the Hoover-Watson contest in the Indiana primary tomorrow, their eyes were levelled on the committee—more from a desire to see the show than from any expectation that it could have a vital influence on the pre-convention campaign.

Eight of the fourteen candidates of both parties were called for opening of the investigation this morning. The list included four republicans, Borah of Idaho, Goff of West Virginia, Curtis of Kansas and Norris of Nebraska, Hitchcock of Nebraska, and four democrats, George of Georgia, Hull of Tennessee, Hitchcock of Nebraska and Walsh of Montana (who has withdrawn).

Senators Watson of Indiana and Reed of Missouri will appear later in the week. Wednesday the committee will go to Annapolis to get the testimony of Gov. Ritchie and Thursday it will go to New York or Albany to hear Gov. Al Smith.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover and former Gov. Lowden of Illinois will be heard later.

The confession has been corroborated partly by Helen Riggs, 17, of Burns, Kan., with whom he sought a date after the murders. When she declined, he went to a movie with two boy companions. A guilty plea would result probably in sentence of life imprisonment.

INDIANA VOTERS AROUSSED BY THE HEATED CAMPAIGN

EXPECT TO CAST HEAVY VOTE
AT PRIMARY ELECTION
TOMORROW

WATSON AND HOOVER FORCES
ARE EACH PREDICTING VICTORY

By BERT M. DENBY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Indianapolis, Ind., May 7.—(UP)—Aroused by one of the most heated campaigns in the state's history, Indiana voters are expected to cast its greatest primary election vote tomorrow.

The conclusion of the fight between Senator James E. Watson, favorite son candidate for the presidential nomination, and the forces behind Herbert Hoover found each group predicting that its candidate would sweep the state.

The battle for Indiana's 33 delegates to the republican national convention completely overshadowed the lesser political skirmishes between state candidates.

The contest between the Hoover and Watson supporters has been so close that most political observers found little on which to base their predictions of the outcome.

The Hoover forces, demanding that Indiana follow the example of Illinois, have based their campaign upon the corruption issue and have appealed to the voters for a mass uprising against the old political order.

VIEWS HIS END WITH CALMNESS

St. Louis, May 7.—(UP)—Henry St. John, youthful confessed murderer of Frank W. Murphy, a druggist, seemed to take consolation today in the knowledge that the death penalty will be demanded for him.

Explaining that he had served time in Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri penitentiaries, St. John told Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener: "I've had enough of that kind of life. I killed Murphy without reason, and know it was wrong. If you guarantee that I will hang, I'll plead guilty."

Sidener told the youth he could not guarantee that he would hang, but said he "certainly will recommend the death penalty."

Murphy was shot during an attempted holdup here last Thursday.

EARTH DAM NEARS CRUMBLING STAGE OF COLLAPSE

700 FOOT STRUCTURE IN SOUTH CAROLINA HOLDS BACK 5 BILLION GALLONS WATER

EROSIVE WORK OF CREVASSE WATERS AND RAINS ARE DOING DAMAGE

Table Rock Cove, S. C., May 7.—(UP)—The battle to save the Saluda river valley from flood destruction was at a critical stage today.

Sloughs in the crumbling earthen dam here increased danger of a sudden collapse of the 700 foot structure, which holds back 5,000,000,000 gallons of water.

Erosive work of crevasse waters and of rain had brought the huge gap in the Greenville reservoir dam to within 75 feet of the basin itself. Failure of this endangered part of the normally 750 feet wide dam to hold would catapult the waters of a great lake down a narrow mountain valley past a half dozen textile mill towns of a total population of sixteen thousand.

Engineers last night ordered everyone out of the immediate threatened district, including newspapermen. Armed deputies patrolled the dam vicinity and all roads into the valley for 25 miles below.

From leaks at the base of the dam, spouting water forcing its way out caused new slides during the night. On ability of engineers under the $2,000,000 structure rests the fate of textile mills and homes down the valley.

H. W. Perry, superintendent of the Greenville, S. C., water works, was hopeful. He was of the opinion that pressure of the escaping water had been relieved by opening of a drainage channel and the water main to Greenville and that drainage would be gradual.

Crumbling of the dam, caused by collapse of a drainage pipe under the structure, has been in process since early Friday night. Homes down the valley were evacuated before daylight Saturday.

The cotton mill towns of Piedmont, Pelzer, Williamston and Ware Shoals sandbagged foundations of buildings near the river. Power dams along the Saluda have flood gates open in event of a flood torrent. Every precaution has been taken for a distance of 60 miles from Table Rock Cove.

Several thousand rural families, the only inhabitants of the 25-mile stretch of narrow valley just below the dam, slept last night in improvised shelters on hilltops. Rain added to their discomfort.

COMPROMISE ON FLOOD CONTROL BILL REACHED

PRESIDENT CONFERS WITH SENATE AND HOUSE CONFEREES

CHANGES TO BE MADE TO SUIT CHIEF EXECUTIVE COOLIDGE

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 7.—A compromise on the chief controversy between President Coolidge and congress on the Jones-Reid Mississippi river flood control bill—hinging on floodway rights—was reached at a White House conference today between the president and the ten senate and house conferees, Chairman Reid of the house flood control committee announced.

President Coolidge informed the conferees, Reid said, that he would sign the bill with the compromise and a few other minor revisions that were considered.

The conferees will meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon to make the changes, he said. This revised measure later will be submitted to house and senate for final approval, after which the bill will go to the White House.

Reid explained the compromise provides that the government acquire flowage rights only where floodways are created through land not hitherto flooded and not considered natural floodways. The government would not have to acquire rights in land considered a natural floodway, that is land hitherto subject to flood when the Mississippi has broken its banks.

The bill, as it stands, requires the government to acquire flowage rights in all floodways.

Reid secured permission from the house today to withdraw the conference report and submit it again to the conferees for changes.

DREDGE IS RAMMED BY OIL TANKER

NAVESINK, WAR DEPARTMENT VESSEL, SUNK BY THE SWINBURN

DREDGE DIFFICULT TO HANDLE IN STIFF WIND AND EBB TIDE

New York, May 7.—(UP)—Forty-seven men were rescued from the water of the lower New York harbor today after their dredge, the Navesink, a war department vessel, had been rammed and sunk by the tanker Swinburn. First reports from the scene of the collision said that the Navesink had been hit by the Cunard liner Caronia.

The crew of the Navesink was picked up by other harbor craft. John Sims, 25, New Bedford, Mass., second officer of the Navesink, told of the collision.

"At 3:58 this morning, just before I was to turn over command of the dredge to Harry Lebew, the chief officer, the dredge was going down the narrows on a strong ebb tide," said Sims. "A northeast wind was blowing. We had been working up and down the narrows on the Staten Island side during the night."

"I saw the Swinburn ahead of us, but the dredge was hard to handle because of its great weight and wide beam. I ordered full speed astern and cut the helm over, but because of the tide and weight it failed to answer and swung into the bow of the Swinburn."

"As the boats crashed a box in the pilot house hit my right leg and pinned me to the wall. I worked loose and ordered men to go below and find out whether the dredge was leaking. They came up and said everything was all right. About 30 seconds later it began to sink and I pulled the whistle and rang the alarm."

"As the water rushed over the deck, four and a half minutes from the time of the collision the Navesink sunk, foremost. The pilot house, with me in it, was torn away and started to float down the bay. I was picked up by a lifeboat from the Standard Arrow, a Standard Oil boat. The Caronia and the White Star liner Adriatic, which were nearby, lowered lifeboats, but I believe the Adriatic boats were the only ones to pick up anybody, and they got three or four."

Lars Nelson, seaman, was washed overboard when the dredge sank. With the aid of a lifebelt, Nelson swam a mile and a half to the Fort Wadsworth reservation. He was taken to the marine hospital nearby.

Chief Officer Lebew was resting at his Brooklyn home too ill from the experience to be interviewed. Samuel Colbert, chief engineer of the dredge, was discharged from the hospital and started to assist in checking up on the remainder of the crew.

The bandits fled in an automobile which they deserted at the outskirts of the city, and disappeared.

Berlin, May 7.—(UP)—A Russian note to Poland, delivered at Warsaw today, charged that a young Russian who shot twice at the Soviet trade representative there intended to assassinate Russian Minister Bogumoloff.

The note protested against the "passive" attitude of the Polish government toward Russian royalists refusing there.

It said that the Russian government would reserve the "right to further action" unless the present situation was altered.

The Russian note advanced the theory that the young Russian, Emiore Wojciechowski, who shot at Soviet Trade Commissioner Lizarieff as the commissioner was driving through a busy Warsaw street, really was trying to kill Russian Minister Bogumoloff.

Bugumoloff, the note said, daily passed the spot where the attempt occurred at the same time as Wojciechowski fired at Lizarieff's car. It was complained that after the assassination of Russian Minister Volkoff on June 11, 1927, Russia notified the Polish foreign office that Wojciechowski was an active agent of a Russian anti-Soviet organization. The Polish government denied this.

A few days later, the note said, Russia handed the Polish foreign office a list of names of alleged anti-Soviet agents. Wojciechowski's name it was alleged, was on the list.

700 FOOT STRUCTURE IN SOUTH CAROLINA HOLDS BACK 5 BILLION GALLONS WATER

EROSIVE WORK OF CREVASSE WATERS AND RAINS ARE DOING DAMAGE

Table Rock Cove, S. C., May 7.—(UP)—The battle to save the Saluda river valley from flood destruction was at a critical stage today.

Sloughs in the crumbling earthen dam here increased danger of a sudden collapse of the 700 foot structure, which holds back 5,000,000,000 gallons of water.

Erosive work of crevasse waters and of rain had brought the huge gap in the Greenville reservoir dam to within 75 feet of the basin itself. Failure of this endangered part of the normally 750 feet wide dam to hold would catapult the waters of a great lake down a narrow mountain valley past a half dozen textile mill towns of a total population of sixteen thousand.

Engineers last night ordered everyone out of the immediate threatened district, including newspapermen. Armed deputies patrolled the dam vicinity and all roads into the valley for 25 miles below.

From leaks at the base of the dam, spouting water forcing its way out caused new slides during the night. On ability of engineers under the $2,000,000 structure rests the fate of textile mills and homes down the valley.

H. W. Perry, superintendent of the Greenville, S. C., water works, was hopeful. He was of the opinion that pressure of the escaping water had been relieved by opening of a drainage channel and the water main to Greenville and that drainage would be gradual.

Crumbling of the dam, caused by collapse of a drainage pipe under the structure, has been in process since early Friday night. Homes down the valley were evacuated before daylight Saturday.

The cotton mill towns of Piedmont, Pelzer, Williamston and Ware Shoals sandbagged foundations of buildings near the river. Power dams along the Saluda have flood gates open in event of a flood torrent. Every precaution has been taken for a distance of 60 miles from Table Rock Cove.

Several thousand rural families, the only inhabitants of the 25-mile stretch of narrow valley just below the dam, slept last night in improvised shelters on hilltops. Rain added to their discomfort.

COMPROMISE ON FLOOD CONTROL BILL REACHED

PRESIDENT CONFERS WITH SENATE AND HOUSE CONFEREES

CHANGES TO BE MADE TO SUIT CHIEF EXECUTIVE COOLIDGE

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, May 7.—A compromise on the chief controversy between President Coolidge and congress on the Jones-Reid Mississippi river flood control bill—hinging on floodway rights—was reached at a White House conference today between the president and the ten senate and house conferees, Chairman Reid of the house flood control committee announced.

President Coolidge informed the conferees, Reid said, that he would sign the bill with the compromise and a few other minor revisions that were considered.

The conferees will meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon to make the changes, he said. This revised measure later will be submitted to house and senate for final approval, after which the bill will go to the White House.

Reid explained the compromise provides that the government acquire flowage rights only where floodways are created through land not hitherto flooded and not considered natural floodways. The government would not have to acquire rights in land considered a natural floodway, that is land hitherto subject to flood when the Mississippi has broken its banks.

The bill, as it stands, requires the government to acquire flowage rights in all floodways.

Reid secured permission from the house today to withdraw the conference report and submit it again to the conferees for changes.

DREDGE IS RAMMED BY OIL TANKER

NAVESINK, WAR DEPARTMENT VESSEL, SUNK BY THE SWINBURN

DREDGE DIFFICULT TO HANDLE IN STIFF WIND AND EBB TIDE

New York, May 7.—(UP)—Forty-seven men were rescued from the water of the lower New York harbor today after their dredge, the Navesink, a war department vessel, had been rammed and sunk by the tanker Swinburn. First reports from the scene of the collision said that the Navesink had been hit by the Cunard liner Caronia.

The crew of the Navesink was picked up by other harbor craft. John Sims, 25, New Bedford, Mass., second officer of the Navesink, told of the collision.

"At 3:58 this morning, just before I was to turn over command of the dredge to Harry Lehow, the chief officer, the dredge was going down the narrows on a strong ebb tide," said Sims. "A northeast wind was blowing. We had been working up and down the narrows on the Staten Island side during the night."

"I saw the Swinburn ahead of us, but the dredge was hard to handle because of its great weight and wide beam. I ordered full speed astern and cut the helm over, but because of the tide and weight it failed to answer and swung into the bow of the Swinburn."

"As the boats crashed a box in the pilot house hit my right leg and pinned me to the wall. I worked loose and ordered men to go below and find out whether the dredge was leaking. They came up and said everything was all right. About 30 seconds later it began to sink and I pulled the whistle and rang the alarm."

"As the water rushed over the deck, four and a half minutes from the time of the collision the Navesink sunk, foremost. The pilot house, with me in it, was torn away and started to float down the bay. I was picked up by a lifeboat from the Standard Arrow, a Standard Oil boat. The Caronia and the White Star liner Adriatic, which were nearby, lowered lifeboats, but I believe the Adriatic boats were the only ones to pick up anybody, and they got three or four."

Lars Nelson, seaman, was washed overboard when the dredge sank. With the aid of a lifebelt, Nelson swam a mile and a half to the Fort Wadsworth reservation. He was taken to the marine hospital nearby.

Chief Officer Lehow was resting at his Brooklyn home too ill from the experience to be interviewed. Samuel Colbert, chief engineer of the dredge, was discharged from the hospital and started to assist in checking up on the remainder of the crew.

AUDIENCE IN PANIC AS THEATRE HELD UP, TWO MEN WOUNDED

San Diego, Cal., May 7.—(UP)—One man was probably fatally wounded, a police officer was shot and the audience was thrown into a panic late last night when three men held up the New California theater here.

Joe Malloy, assistant manager of the theater, was shot during the holdup and Archie Comstock, traffic officer, was shot in a running gun battle that followed.

The bandits fled in an automobile which they deserted at the outskirts of the city, and disappeared.

San Diego, Cal., May 7.—Joe Malloy, assistant manager of the California theater here, died early today from wounds received in a holdup of the theater last night.

Malloy, who formerly lived in Allentown, Pa., was shot while three bandits were attempting to rob the box office of the theater.

Will the Cheap Grade Paint Stand Up Under Snow, Rain and Blustering Sun?

That's the abuse the paint on your house will have to stand for the next five years. Tests are being made by all high grade paint manufacturers and they have already proved that the so-called cheap paint is far more expensive to use than the high grade brands such as Blood's.

The cheap paint hasn't the "staying" qualities and one should remember that you get just what you pay for.

"Tillie" Circus Will Take You Back to Old "Kid" Days

What small boy has not had the thrill of seeing the Big Top of the circus rise like magic early in the morning on the home town lot when the big show comes around? The boy who missed that sight, which is becoming less and less frequent, has missed a lot, but he will see it—and the whole bag of tricks—in "Tillie's Punctured Romance," which will be at the Lyceum tonight and Tuesday.

"Pan-American"

"Pan" was originally a combining form used in Greek words. It means all. For instance, Pan-Hellenic means embracing all the Greeks. The form is used as a prefix before proper adjectives. Pan-American means embracing all Americans, or all the Americas—North, South, and Central. A Pan-American conference is a conference composed of delegates from the various republics in the New world.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Wonderful Library

There are believed to be 500,000 books and 60,000 manuscripts in the Vatican library. There are 100,000 volumes in the archives. These represent 14 separate collections, each having its individual catalogue.

Record for Slaughter

According to ancient records, the battle of Chalons, where Attila, the Hun, was met by the Gothic prince, Thorismund, commanding the Visigoths and Roman forces, was the most sanguinary battle ever recorded in history. The dead left upon the field are estimated as between 250,000 and 300,000 men.

Mississippi's Width

There was great range in the width of the Mississippi at the time of the discovery of this country. From Lake Itasca to Minneapolis the natural width increased from less than 50 feet to more than 400 feet at ordinary stages. Below Cairo the natural low-water width is from 1,000 to 7,500 feet; the bank-full width, 2,000 to 10,500 feet.

Sacred Mountains

The mountains of Tai Shan in Shantung, Hang Shan in Shensi, Sung Shan in Honan, Hsu Shan in Shensi, and Heng Shan in Hunan are held sacred by the Confucianists. In the opinion of most Chinese, Wu T'ai Shan in Shansi and Omei in Szechuen are equally sacred. The latter are shrines for Buddhist pilgrims.

How well this little incident symbolizes the wistful yearnings after "nice things," the stifled personal vanities that the Mothers of the World tuck away in the bottommost corners of their hearts.

STATE ALL "SET" FOR 1,500,000 VACATIONISTS

SCANNING the Minneapolis Sunday Tribune yesterday we noticed the confident feeling voiced regarding the tourist business of the state this season and Brainerd shares in the optimism expressed.

Brainerd and the lake country with over a dozen large conventions booked are assured of a lot of visitors in groups, plus the regular tourist travel which will bulk large. There is a healthy movement in lake realty. The other day a Brainerd man sold a lake cottage with one insertion of a Dispatch want ad.

Cottages are building too. On North Round lake, near Gull, in Sunset View addition platted by Anton Mahlum, Joseph W. DuFour of the Pittsburgh Coal Company of Minneapolis, is completing a beautiful and expensive lake home.

On North Long lake, A. E. Atkinson of Minneapolis, has bought 30 acres from the Mahlum interests and is erecting a wonderful lake home planned by a Minneapolis architect who has many architectural successes to his credit.

On all sides one sees evidence of interest in the lake country. More than 1,500,000 tourists will visit Minneapolis during the four months of the summer season, it was estimated Saturday by H. C. Hotaling, secretary of the Ten Thousand Lakes association, as state departments, private organizations and hundreds of resort keepers began preparations for the biggest year in their history, as reported in the Minneapolis Tribune.

"We've never had so many early inquiries as we have had so far this year," Mr. Hotaling said. "They have been bombarding us from all points of the compass at the rate of 200 a day. We even had one inquiry last week from a prospective vacationist in Chile, South America, and there are others coming in daily from California, Mexico, Alaska, in fact, practically every state in the union."

Scores of resort owners throughout the state are ready for the opening of their season, ranging from May 15 in the southern part to June 1 in the north. Most of them, Mr. Hotaling said, will have added attractions this year to their natural advantages.

Although fishing this year probably will be better than in several past years tourists, Mr. Hotaling said, are not inquiring about the possibilities of a good catch as they did in previous years.

"They are anxious to find out more about golf courses, tennis courts, and other forms of recreation rather than fishing," he said. "They either know all about Minnesota's fish or else they don't care so much about it. At any rate, the man who wants to fish is going to find plenty of them there this year, and the man who doesn't care to fish will find plenty of recreation for his vacation."

"Summer resorts are so situated in Minnesota that tourists can hike through pine forests one day, play golf the next, go for extensive boat rides another day, swim, fish and find a score of good amusements."

Lake levels, according to J. F. Gould, state commissioner of conservation, are higher this year than in many years. Lakes which last year were three feet over the 1926 levels are still higher this year, in some cases as much as five feet over the 1926 level.

Hundreds of lakes are to be restocked with fish, operations in which will be started about May 10, when the first consignment of baby pike will be planted.

With the season for trout fishing already open, Mr. Gould pointed out that the next opening date for fishermen will be May 15 when the season opens on wall-eyed pike, pickerel, perch, muskellunge and sand pike, and May 29 for the opening of the season in southern Minnesota on bass, crappies and sunfish, and June 21 for these fish in the northern zone.

Daily limits on fish were announced by Mr. Gould as follows: black, silver gray and yellow bass and wall-eyed pike, eight; trout, crappies, pickerel, sand pike, sunfish and rock bass, 15; lake trout and salmon, 10; total mixture of fish in one day, 15.

Pike and pickerel must measure 14 inches in length; black bass, 10 inches; crappies, 7, white fish, 16 inches; sand pike, 12 inches; rock bass, 6 inches; sunfish, 5 inches, and muskellunge, 30 inches. There is no size limit on trout.

Road conditions in Minnesota are expected to be better than before, according to Highway Commissioner C. M. Babcock, who pointed to hundreds of miles of roads that are being kept open under all conditions now, where before they were closed in inclement weather. He declared that the department will have excellent maintenance throughout the season for the expected heavy tourist traffic, and that all roads will be open.

"The estimate of 1,500,000 visitors this year is based on the increases we have had in past years, which have averaged about 200,000," Mr. Hotaling said. "Last year our tourist traffic totaled 1,400,000."

FUTURE OF THE SMALL TOWN

THERE is much being written as to what the future holds for the small town—that of two thousand or less people, says the Granite Falls Tribune in an interesting editorial. A number appear to be of the opinion that because of the automobile and the good roads the business will mostly be attracted to the larger cities and the small towns will have to be satisfied with what is left.

This may be true in a measure, but it would appear to The Tribune that the destiny of the small town lies with the town itself and that good roads and automobiles can be made to mean ten times as much to it as they can to a city.

Three things should determine the small town's future: A good market for the products of the farm, a good market in which to buy, and advertising. With these three essentials it would seem that the small city merchant has every advantage. He knows his trade, his patron can trade with him with less effort, his interests are identical with those of his trade and he is in a position to extend intelligent credit, if he so chooses. An occasional purchaser may slip away to a larger town for some article, attracted there by the advertising of the merchants of that town, but if it is twenty-five or thirty miles the distance is too great to expect the patronage of that purchaser more than occasionally.

But this occasional loss of business is more than made up to the live town by the increased buying of this age and the same tactics that were employed to bring business twenty-five miles should be doubly effective for business in an area of up to fifteen miles. A live town in the center of a good community has a bright future before it.

THE American Legion Post of Crosby will sponsor the Fourth of July celebration this year. It is expected to raise a fund of $800 to start with, most of which has already been subscribed.

"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS

Sweet Springs Inn is the scene of an early morning duel over a miniature of Betsy Patterson. Her handsome French tutor, La Vert, wins the duel and the miniature from Preston, who boasted Betsy had given it to him. Strolling in the woods, La Vert meets Betsy, who has been reading in the stream on a dare. He is silent while she chides him for his lack of ambition. Returning to the Inn barefoot, Betsy laughingly overcomes her father's wrath at her behavior. She is surrounded by eager admirers when La Vert arrives for her French lesson.

"No, I must leave you," Betsy dropped a courtesy and began to move towards the tutor. "I shall leave you, however, in care of Cousin Mary. She will entertain you until I return." She drew Mary forward, her arm about her cousin's waist. Mary smiled shyly, and the men bowed. But their eyes were for Betsy, and they watched her every movement as she walked over to La Vert and spoke to him. "I am ready, now," she smiled, and then turned to pick up a French book from the table. "Yes, Ma'mselle," the tutor bowed. "Where shall we have the lesson this morning? In your parlor?" "I suppose so," Betsy moved towards the open window. "It's the one place there is not a crowd, it seems. Only Aunt Ellen."

"Yes, it does seem difficult to find you alone at any time," La Vert put in moodily.

"Oh, my goodness, now you're in a temper again. Go right on being angry—I like it," Betsy gurgled.

"I am very glad that you are pleased with something I do," he retorted, preparing to follow Betsy through the window. "I seem to be unable—" His voice broke off suddenly and he stared out into the garden with widening eyes. He looked the second time, and frowned.

What he saw through the window was a scene showing two men dismounting from their horses. A stable boy ran up and took the bridles of their mounts and stood holding the spirited animals as they pawed and stamped the ground. It was certainly no unusual sight to see two men dismount, but it was their dress and their faces that seemed to interest La Vert. Their blue uniforms were only too familiar; their tricorne hats only too well known to him.

"You said, Monsieur," Betsy looked at the man beside her, waiting for him to finish his remark.

"No, I was about to say," La Vert turned and bowed "that I—that you—you must excuse me, Ma'mselle. I cannot give you the lesson now. I shall return later."

With a nod he was gone.

Betsy stared in astonishment after the tutor. Then she drew herself up proudly, tossing her red head angrily. She hated herself for allowing this man to have so much effect on her. No one else had ever been able to touch her feelings before. And now—now, when she had so demeaned herself as to become friendly—even familiar with a school master, he rushed off from her as though she were contaminated. Hereafter, she promised herself, she'd keep the man in his place. She returned to the group of men as they parted to receive her.

"Why, what's the matter, Betsy?" Mary looked at her cousin anxiously, and noted the gathering storm that was brewing in the now green eyes.

Betsy stamped her foot. "He's only in a temper," she explained curtly. "After all, it's what one would expect—from a school teacher!" She laughed nervously, and with forced gaiety led the conversation into other channels.

But as Betsy was laughing and trying to drive out the thoughts that surged through her mind, La Vert was hurrying down the steps and into the garden. As he reached the door of the hotel and stepped out onto the porch he was confronted by the two military gentlemen. They drew themselves up and saluted smartly, clicking the heels of their heavy boots.

"Captain Bonaparte!" they both exclaimed in unison. "Thank heaven we have found you at last," the taller of the two added. They both stood wrinking their brows, however, as they gazed at the black garb of the man they had saluted.

"Sacre! St. Pierre! Dufresne! Captain Bonaparte bowed. "Here is my bad dream out!"

"Captain, you have occasioned us great concern," St. Pierre began, majestically shaking his head.

"Gentlemen! Please!" Captain Bonaparte raised a cautioning finger to his lips and spoke in a low tone of voice. "My dear friends, please! I must ask you to respect my incognito. I am known here as Monsieur La Vert!"

"But why—what is this mad masquerade, Mon Capitaine?" St. Pierre questioned, his black mustaches quivering.

"Ah, of course—you do not know," Captain Bonaparte smiled. "I have engaged myself as tutor to Mistress Betsy Patterson, of Baltimore."

"Sapristi!" St. Pierre looked at his companion, utter horror written on his face. Capitaine Bonaparte, professeur! "Sir, this is impossible. This has gone quite far enough!"

"Far enough!" Dufresne broke in angrily. "Too far, mon Capitaine. Word of your escapade has already reached Napoleon! He is much angered against you. He sends you to America as his representative and you insult by indifference, these good people who would honor him in your person."

"Ah, but life is tiresome," Captain Bonaparte sighed. "The Fete Americaine is so formal! They do not speak to me as a man. It is always as Jerome, the brother of the great Napoleon. I must be apart—I must forget that I am young. I must always reflect my brother's dignity. Eh bien! I become ennué—I run away—Mais—St. Pierre, I promise to reform." He held out his hand and smiled—a winning, innocent smile that would have softened the hearts of any two good, old soldiers.

"We understand," St. Pierre nodded gravely, "but you may recall the purpose for which Napoleon sent you to America, and, too, that we are responsible to him for all your actions."

"And certainly, sir, you do not believe that your actions have fostered the respect for France that was expected," Dufresne began severely. "Your sudden disappearance before the reception in your honor in Philadelphia is something that we have never been able to excuse."

Jerome smiled and stared out over the garden. Suddenly he laughed. Before his eyes flashed a picture of that night of the great fete in his honor. The low, Colonial building of Independence Hall, lighted and sparkling with life. The flags of France and the United States crossed over the pillared entrance. Horsemen riding up; coaches depositing their brilliant array of bejeweled society beauties. The prominent office-holders and their wives receiving. Two horsemen—a coach following. "The envoy of the Republic of France, Captain Jerome Bonaparte!" St. Pierre throwing open the door of the coach. "Empty! He laughed again."

"You are to return with us at once, Sir," Dufresne called the wandering mind of his charge back to the present issue.

"Yes, yes, my good Dufresne," Jerome smiled. "I promise I will go back with you to that tiresome Philadelphia. But after one more week here at the Springs," he amended. "Just one more week with my beautiful pupil, Mistress Betsy Patterson. And you must swear to preserve my incognito for that time. For one more week let me be simply Monsieur La Vert, the French tutor."

"I regret to say that it is impossible, my Captain," St. Pierre explained hastily. "We do not go to Philadelphia but to Baltimore, now. There is a fete arranged there in your honor."

"But Mistress Betsy! I have promised her," Jerome pleaded.

"Have you forgotten, mon Capitaine, that Napoleon has made overtures of marriage for you with the family of Her Highness, the Princess Friedericka of Wurttemberg?" Dufresne demanded. "How shall the Court of Wurttemberg receive the news of your—your indifference?"

"Oh, to the devil with the Court of Wurttemberg!" Jerome laughed, refusing to be impressed with the seriousness of the occasion.

The Man Who Is Twelve Years Old

I know a man and he lives nearby

In the land called everywhere.

And you might not think he is a man

from the hat

Or the clothes he may choose to wear.

But 'neath his jacket with many a patch

Lies a heart more precious than gold,

A heart of the man 'neath the coat of a boy.

A man who is twelve years old.

For we never can tell what the future may make

Of the boys that we carelessly meet.

There's many a Congressman doing

the chores

And Presidents' play in the street.

The hands that are busy with play-

things now

The reins of power will hold.

So I take off my hat and I proudly salute

The man who is twelve years old.

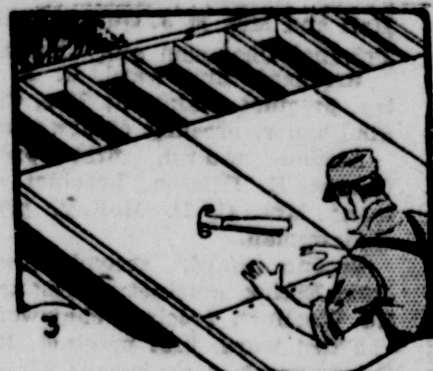

With this issue we bring our series of articles on Boy Scouting to a close. We have endeavored by various items to acquaint you with some of the newer things in Scouting, as well as repeat some of the older things that are fundamental and never grow old so long as we continue to have boys. A scout-building program must be complete or it can not reach nor influence all boys. It takes years to develop it and reach all boys. Each year makes it easier for the council because more Boy Scouts become helpful due to their extended period of training. What the Council need now develop is a simpler and more effective finance-contributing agency. Brainerd must raise as its quota this year $2500. Due to the greater area and greater number of contributors Brainerd's quota has decreased gradually from $4,000, which was needed when we first began this work. Unfortunately some men able to contribute regularly have considered that each successive year they could properly cut their subscription in half. That may be alright for once; but if done too often, the remaining fraction becomes nearly microscopic in size.

We make, in conclusion, a strong appeal to all people that when the solicitors call on them during the next few days that they do not delay these men unnecessarily long, for these are busy men and are gratuitously giving their time to see that Scouting is adequately supported and perpetuated in Brainerd. Can we count on your help? We think we can.

We even had one inquiry last week from a prospective vacationist in Chile, South America, and there are others coming in daily from California, Mexico, Alaska, in fact, practically every state in the union."

Scores of resort owners throughout the state are ready for the opening of their season, ranging from May 15 in the southern part to June 1 in the north. Most of them, Mr. Hotaling said, will have added attractions this year to their natural advantages.

Although fishing this year probably will be better than in several past years tourists, Mr. Hotaling said, are not inquiring about the possibilities of a good catch as they did in previous years.

"They are anxious to find out more about golf courses, tennis courts, and other forms of recreation rather than fishing," he said. "They either know all about Minnesota's fish or else they don't care so much about it. At any rate, the man who wants to fish is going to find plenty of them there this year, and the man who doesn't care to fish will find plenty of recreation for his vacation."

"Summer resorts are so situated in Minnesota that tourists can hike through pine forests one day, play golf the next, go for extensive boat rides another day, swim, fish and find a score of good amusements."

Lake levels, according to J. F. Gould, state commissioner of conservation, are higher this year than in many years. Lakes which last year were three feet over the 1926 levels are still higher this year, in some cases as much as five feet over the 1926 level.

Hundreds of lakes are to be restocked with fish, operations in which will be started about May 10, when the first consignment of baby pike will be planted.

With the season for trout fishing already open, Mr. Gould pointed out that the next opening date for fishermen will be May 15 when the season opens on wall-eyed pike, pickerel, perch, muskellunge and sand pike, and May 29 for the opening of the season in southern Minnesota on bass, crappies and sunfish, and June 21 for these fish in the northern zone.

Daily limits on fish were announced by Mr. Gould as follows: black, silver gray and yellow bass and wall-eyed pike, eight; trout, crappies, pickerel, sand pike, sunfish and rock bass, 15; lake trout and salmon, 10; total mixture of fish in one day, 15.

Pike and pickerel must measure 14 inches in length; black bass, 10 inches; crappies, 7, white fish, 16 inches; sand pike, 12 inches; rock bass, 6 inches; sunfish, 5 inches, and muskellunge, 30 inches. There is no size limit on trout.

Road conditions in Minnesota are expected to be better than before, according to Highway Commissioner C. M. Babcock, who pointed to hundreds of miles of roads that are being kept open under all conditions now, where before they were closed in inclement weather. He declared that the department will have excellent maintenance throughout the season for the expected heavy tourist traffic, and that all roads will be open.

"The estimate of 1,500,000 visitors this year is based on the increases we have had in past years, which have averaged about 200,000," Mr. Hotaling said. "Last year our tourist traffic totaled 1,400,000."

FUTURE OF THE SMALL TOWN

THERE is much being written as to what the future holds for the small town—that of two thousand or less people, says the Granite Falls Tribune in an interesting editorial. A number appear to be of the opinion that because of the automobile and the good roads the business will mostly be attracted to the larger cities and the small towns will have to be satisfied with what is left.

This may be true in a measure, but it would appear to The Tribune that the destiny of the small town lies with the town itself and that good roads and automobiles can be made to mean ten times as much to it as they can to a city.

Three things should determine the small town's future: A good market for the products of the farm, a good market in which to buy, and advertising. With these three essentials it would seem that the small city merchant has every advantage. He knows his trade, his patron can trade with him with less effort, his interests are identical with those of his trade and he is in a position to extend intelligent credit, if he so chooses. An occasional purchaser may slip away to a larger town for some article, attracted there by the advertising of the merchants of that town, but if it is twenty-five or thirty miles the distance is too great to expect the patronage of that purchaser more than occasionally.

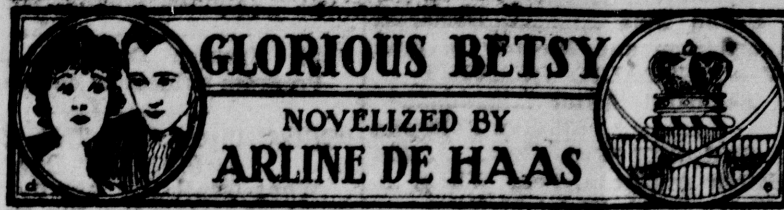

But this occasional loss of business is more than made up to the live town by the increased buying of this age and the same tactics that were employed to bring business twenty-five miles should be doubly effective for business in an area of up to fifteen miles. A live town in the center of a good community has a bright future before it.

THE American Legion Post of Crosby will sponsor the Fourth of July celebration this year. It is expected to raise a fund of $300 to start with, most of which has already been subscribed.

GLORIOUS BETSY

NOVELIZED BY
ARLINE DE HAAS

Copyright 1928, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"GLORIOUS BETSY," starring Dolores Costello, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel. Based on the play by Rida Johnson Young.

SYNOPSIS

Sweet Springs Inn is the scene of an early morning duel over a miniature of Betsy Patterson. Her handsome French tutor, La Vert, wins the duel and the miniature from Preston, who boasted Betsy had given it to him. Strolling in the woods, La Vert meets Betsy, who has been wading in the stream on a dare. He is silent while she chides him for his lack of ambition. Returning to the Inn barefoot, Betsy laughingly overcomes her father's wrath at her behavior. She is surrounded by eager admirers when La Vert arrives for her French lesson.

"No, I must leave you," Betsy dropped a courtesy and began to move towards the tutor. "I shall leave you, however, in care of Cousin Mary. She will entertain you until I return." She drew Mary forward, her arm about her cousin's waist. Mary smiled shyly, and the men bowed. But their eyes were for Betsy, and they watched her every movement as she walked over to La Vert and spoke to him.
"I am ready, now," she smiled, and then turned to pick up a French book from the table.
"Yes, Ma'mselle," the tutor bowed. "Where shall we have the lesson this morning? In your parlor?"
"I suppose so," Betsy moved towards the open window. "It's the

But as Betsy was laughing and trying to drive out the thoughts that surged through her mind, La Vert was hurrying down the steps and into the garden. As he reached the door of the hotel and stepped out onto the porch he was confronted by the two military gentlemen. They drew themselves up and saluted smartly, clicking the heels of their heavy boots.

"Captain Bonaparte!" they both exclaimed in unison. "Thank heaven we have found you at last," the taller of the two added. They both stood wrinking their brows, however, as they gazed at the black garb of the man they had saluted.

"Sacre! St. Pierre! Dufresne! Captain Bonaparte bowed. "Here is my bad dream out!"

"Captain, you have occasioned us great concern," St. Pierre began, majestically shaking his head. "Gentlemen, please!" Captain Bonaparte raised a cautioning finger to his lips and spoke in a low tone of voice. "My dear friends, please! I must ask you to respect my incognito. I am known here as Monsieur La Vert!"

"But why—what is this mad masquerade, Mon Capitaine?" St. Pierre questioned, his black mustaches quivering.
"Ah, of course—you do not know," Captain Bonaparte smiled. "I have engaged myself as tutor to Mistress Betsy Patterson, of Baltimore."

"Sapristi!" St. Pierre looked at his companion, utter horror written on his face. Capitaine Bonaparte, professeur! "Sir, this is impossible. This has gone quite far enough!"

"Far enough!" Dufresne broke in angrily. "Too far, mon Capitaine. Word of your escapade has already reached Napoleon! He is much angered against you. He sends you to America as his representative and you insult by indifference, these good people who would honor him in your person."

"Ah, but life is tiresome," Captain Bonaparte sighed. "The Fete Americaine is so formal! They do not speak to me as a man. It is always as Jerome, the brother of the great Napoleon. I must be apart—I must forget that I am young. I must always reflect my brother's dignity. Eh bien! I become ennu! I run away—Mais—St. Pierre, I promise to reform." He held out his hand and smiled—a winning, innocent smile that would have softened the hearts of any two good, old soldiers.

"We understand," St. Pierre nodded gravely, "but you may recall the purpose for which Napoleon sent you to America, and, too, that we are responsible to him for all your actions."

"And certainly, sir, you do not believe that your actions have fostered the respect for France that was expected," Dufresne began severely. "Your sudden disappearance before the reception in your honor in Philadelphia is something that we have never been able to excuse."

Jerome smiled and stared out over the garden. Suddenly he laughed. Before his eyes flashed a picture of that night of the great fete in his honor. The low, Colonial building of Independence Hall, lighted and sparkling with life. The flags of France and the United States crossed over the pillared entrance. Horsemen riding up; coaches depositing their brilliant array of bejeweled society beauties. The prominent office-holders and their wives receiving. Two horsemen—a coach following. "The envoy of the Republic of France, Captain Jerome Bonaparte!" St. Pierre throwing open the door of the coach. mpty! He laughed again.

"You are to return with us at once, Sir," Dufresne called the wandering mind of his charge back to the present issue.

"Yes, yes, my good Dufresne," Jerome smiled. "I promise I will go back with you to that tiresome Philadelphia. But after one more week here at the Springs," he amended. "Just one more week with my beautiful pupil, Mistress Betsy Patterson. And you must swear to preserve my incognito for that time. For one more week let me be simply Monsieur La Vert, the French tutor."

"I regret to say that it is impossible, my Captain," St. Pierre explained hastily. "We do not go to Philadelphia but to Baltimore, now. There is a fete arranged there in your honor."

"But Mistress Betsy! I have promised her," Jerome pleaded.

"Have you forgotten, mon Capitaine, that Napoleon has made overtures of marriage for you with the family of Her Highness, the Princess Friedericka of Wurttemberg?" Dufresne demanded. "How shall the Court of Wurttemberg receive the news of your—your indifference?"

"Oh, to the devil with the Court of Wurttemberg!" Jerome laughed, refusing to be impressed with the seriousness of the occasion.

The Man Who Is Twelve Years Old

I know a man and he lives nearby
In the land called everywhere.
And you might not think he is a man
from the hat
Or the clothes he may choose to wear.

But 'neath his jacket with many a patch
Lies a heart more precious than gold,
A heart of the man 'neath the coat of a boy.
A man who is twelve years old.

For we never can tell what the future may make
Of the boys that we carelessly meet.
There's many a Congressman doing the chores
And Presidents' play in the street.

The hands that are busy with playthings now
The reins of power will hold.
So I take off my hat and I proudly salute
The man who is twelve years old.

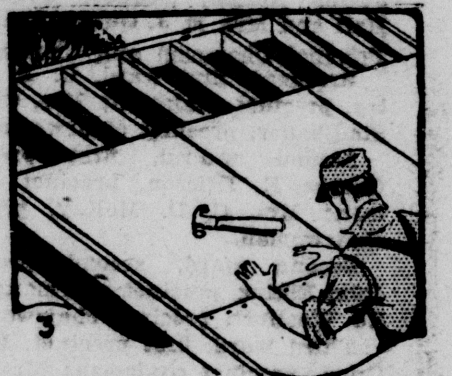

With this issue we bring our series of articles on Boy Scouting to a close. We have endeavored by various items to acquaint you with some of the newer things in Scouting, as well as repeat some of the older things that are fundamental and never grow old so long as we continue to have boys. A scout-building program must be complete or it can not reach nor influence all boys. It takes years to develop it and reach all boys. Each year makes it easier for the council because more Boy Scouts become helpful due to their extended period of training. What the Council need now develop is a simpler and more effective finance-contributing agency. Brainerd must raise as its quota this year $2500. Due to the greater area and greater number of contributors Brainerd's quota has decreased gradually from $6,000, which was needed when we first began this work. Unfortunately some men able to contribute regularly have considered that each successive year they could properly cut their subscription in half. That may be alright for once; but if done too often, the remaining fraction becomes nearly microscopic in size.

We make, in conclusion, a strong appeal to all people that when the solicitors call on them during the next few days that they do not delay these men unnecessarily long, for these are busy men and are gratefully giving their time to see that Scouting is adequately supported and perpetuated in Brainerd. Can we count on your help? We think we can.

DALE SANDERS WINS BUGLING CONTEST

Declared Best Over 40 Boy Scout Buglers Throughout the Northwest

WINS EUROPEAN TRIP

Will Accompany University of Minnesota Band on Tour This Summer

A Brainerd boy, who took up blowing a bugle because he liked it and had no thought of any great reward in store for him was today the champion Boy Scout bugler of the Northwest and the envy of every boy in the state.

That boy, or rather young man, is Dale Sanders, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Sanders, 509 Bluff Avenue, who gave such a wonderful exhibition of bugling at the Northwest Bugling Contest held in connection with the University of Minnesota Appreciation Day program on Saturday that judges without hesitation were unanimous in awarding him first place over a field of 40 buglers.

And by winning the bugling contest Dale Sanders won the honors that go with the distinction—a trip through all the countries of Europe as guest of the University of Minnesota band. Dale will start with the band on their extensive tour on June 22 from Minneapolis returning after 60 days of adventure and thrills experienced on one of the greatest sight seeing tours a human being could wish for.

As an Eagle Scout Dale was prepared to meet success in a manner befitting his position. But even at that it was a very difficult matter for him not to publicly express his happiness. As the winner of the contest Dale became within a minute the object of important news copy and a personage in the eyes of the public.

He was officially congratulated by Governor Theodore Christianson, chatted with him in the governor's box at the Minnesota Stadium and had the pleasure to lead the University of Minnesota band into the great stadium amid the lusty cheers of thousands of people who came to take part in the U. of M. festivities Saturday afternoon. Within an hour he experienced the thrills of a person in the limelight. A battery of newspaper cameras clicked, motion picture cameras buzzed and Dale was kept busy answering dozens of questions asked by dozens of newspaper reporters and press association representatives.

May 5 will be a day long to be remembered by Dale Sanders. The tenseness preceding the important contest, the playing of selections until his lips became swollen and tired and finally the announcement of his name as winner of the contest, will recall some of the moments he experienced. And then the crowds of people, the sight of wide-eyed boys who longed to be in his shoes, and then playing before thousands of people in the University of Minnesota stadium as two great football teams of Minnesota fame awaited on the field to start their spring football event—it was a day of utmost importance in the life of a young man.

Dale started blowing a bugle at the age of 12 years and has played cornet five years, having played with the high school band, the Brainerd Boys' Band and is now playing first cornet in the Brainerd Municipal band. He was the first Eagle Scout in the Crow Wing Area Council.

Five bugle instructors from Fort Snelling were secured as judges for the contest. They were impartial and to please everybody the judges were not permitted to watch the buglers as they competed. Each bugler took his turn playing by number.

The contestants were each allowed to play two groups of three specified calls in turn, whereupon the judges averaged the scoring and picked from the entire group the eight best buglers. These eight boys were then placed behind the screen again where each boy played three groups of calls in rotation. The first group had three specified calls, the second group two specified and then each boy was allowed to play any call of his own choice for the final. While the scores were being added the eight buglers came out in front of the screen and together played "To the Colors."

Dale Sanders was rated 95.4 while second place was won by Frank Arko, of Chisholm, Mesaba Range, with 93.8, who will also be rewarded by the European trip.

In awarding first place one of the judges stated: "Dale Sanders, Scout, who took first place, gave perfect interpretation of the calls and is the best bugler I have ever heard outside of a professional army bugler. He is in a class by himself and I am proud to have been a judge and able to hear his bugling."

Mr. and Mrs. Sanders, parents of the young man, were present at the contest as well as B. Perry Newton, Scout executive of Crow Wing Area Council. David Garceau, of Crosby, who also represented this council, gave a good demonstration of bugling, but due to a severe cold, he was unable to play his best.

Casing of Right Front Wheel Blows Out; Car Hurdles Into Ditch Near Crosby

Two Brainerd men, Clarence Alexander, aged 22, and Wilfred Fogelstrom, aged 27, were severely injured last night a mile east of Crosby when the Ford car in which they were riding blew the casing of a front wheel, turned turtle, and threw both out on their heads on the paving.

Both were taken to the Miners hospital at Crosby where it was found that Alexander had sustained a fractured shoulder and arm and cuts about the head. Fogelstrom is suffering from a sprained right arm, cuts on the head and severe strains of his back and leg. A thorough x-ray examination is to be made to see if any vertebrae in his back had been broken.

The car was thrown into the ditch and upended, damaging the front end and smashing the windshield.

Alexander is a son of James Alexander and Fogelstrom, a son of Mrs. Hulda Fogelstrom, of Southeast Brainerd. The boys were in Crosby Sunday night and drove to Deerwood on the pavement. The accident happened when they were within a block of the city limits at about 7:30 o'clock. A car following picked up the injured men and took them to the hospital.

Brainerd was announced as the convention city for the 1929 conference of the Northwest Baptist Young People at the 1928 convention which closed yesterday at Little Falls following three days session.

Twenty-eight young people of this city from the Baptist church were in attendance at the meetings accompanied by Rev. H. D. Damon. Miss Alta Storm and Wendell Barnes gave short talks while Mildred Vanderwerker and Bertha Cain competed in the Bible contest which was won by Miss Anderson of Long Prairie.

More than 150 young people from the district including St. Cloud to International Falls, comprising practically the entire northern end of the state with the exception of Duluth, were in attendance. The Park Rapids group including 26 delegates who traveled over 100 miles to attend the meet were awarded the attendance banner. Alice Jenks, Parkers Prairie, was named president of the Union. The attendance contest was based on the distance traveled as well as the number of delegates.

No definite date was set for the 1929 convention although it is probable that it will not be held until after schools are closed for the summer vacation.

Clarence Alexander and Wilfred Fogelstrom Receive Severe Injuries

THROWN TO PAVEMENT

Casing of Right Front Wheel Blows Out; Car Hurdles Into Ditch Near Crosby

Two Brainerd men, Clarence Alexander, aged 22, and Wilfred Fogelstrom, aged 27, were severely injured last night a mile east of Crosby when the Ford car in which they were riding blew the casing of a front wheel, turned turtle, and threw both out on their heads on the paving.

Both were taken to the Miners hospital at Crosby where it was found that Alexander had sustained a fractured shoulder and arm and cuts about the head. Fogelstrom is suffering from a sprained right arm, cuts on the head and severe strains of his back and leg. A thorough x-ray examination is to be made to see if any vertebrae in his back had been broken.

The car was thrown into the ditch and upended, damaging the front end and smashing the windshield.

Alexander is a son of James Alexander and Fogelstrom, a son of Mrs. Hulda Fogelstrom, of Southeast Brainerd. The boys were in Crosby Sunday night and drove to Deerwood on the pavement. The accident happened when they were within a block of the city limits at about 7:30 o'clock. A car following picked up the injured men and took them to the hospital.

The Gossard Line of Beauty

Natural and Supported Mark the Way of Fashion

Shining supple silks, drawn deftly, snugly over the figure, in the simplicity of line which marks today's fashions, gay colors, rich and vivid—contrasts, sharp and striking—all demand the groomed supported figure, the one of flowing natural curves. Only when properly and naturally supported to accentuate their real grace and true proportions do even the slimmest of figures achieve the correct lines. Every well dressed woman realizes that to be truly smart one must be properly corseted. Whether you wish the narrow confining bandeaux, the short girdle, or the garment with more support, you will be sure to find just this garment in the Gossard line of beauty.

Blankets, Draperies, Curtains are Easily Washed in the NEW MAYTAG

A big help at Housecleaning Time

THE roomy, machinery-free, cast-aluminum tub of the Maytag is a special convenience when these hard-to-wash things need attention. Even rag rugs may be washed in the Maytag, and it is hand-careful with fine draperies and curtains.

Let the Maytag help you with housecleaning. See how quickly it washes—a big tubful in 2 to 7 minutes, an average washing in an hour, and it washes so thoroughly that no hand-rubbing is necessary, even on collars, cuffs, wristbands or grimy overalls.

The New Roller-Water Remover, with balloon-type rolls, removes both soap and water evenly from all parts of the garments, automatically adjusts the tension and reverses the drainboard.

The many distinctive features of the Maytag have won for it first place among the women of America—World Leadership.

WILD BILL MEHLHORN LEADS AT SANDWICH

SANDY-HAIRED NOMAD OF THE AMERICAN LINKS

SHOOTS A 72 OVER THE DIFFICULT ST. GEORGE'S COURSE

MEHLHORN HAD EIGHT ONE-PUTT GREENS IN THE PLAY

By ROBERT C. DOWSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Sandwich, Eng., May 7.—Wild Bill Mehlhorn, sandy-haired nomad of the American links, took the lead among the early finishers in the first qualifying round of the British Open Golf championship today, with a 72 over the difficult St. George's course.

Continuing to shoot the magnificent golf which has characterized his practice rounds last week, Mehlhorn had eight one-putt greens.

"Bill played miraculously," said little Gene Sarazen, former American Open champion, who has partnered with Mehlhorn, and who took a 77 for the round.

Mehlhorn's 72 was equalled by Len Holland of England, while Geo. Duncan, the "Black Scot," was a stroke behind with 73. Joe Jurado, the little Argentine, who is considered likely to finish among the leaders, had a 75 over the Prince's course.

There 263 starters over the two courses at Sandwich today, half playing St. George's and the other Prince's.

John McHugh, amateur golfer from the Olympic Club of San Francisco, played the Prince's course and turned a card of 77.

The weather was clear, with a strong wind blowing in across the sand dunes from the bay.

The veteran Harry Vardon, five times winner of the British Open, turned in an 84 for his round. Vardon won the title here in 1899 and again in 1911.

Silas Newton, an added American starter, shot a 93.

Joshua Crane, another American amateur, turned in a 91.

By GENE SARAZEN
(Former Open Champion of the United States)

(Copyright, 1928, by United Press) Sandwich, Eng., May 7.—Although we are but a hopeful handful among more than 250 splendid British and European golfers, I cannot help feeling, as we start out today to qualify for the British Open championship, that one of our number has an excellent chance to win the title now held by Bobby Jones.

Walter Hagen, Bill Mehlhorn and Tommy Armour have been shooting such brilliant golf since the weather improved that you may find the eventual winner in that trio. Jim Barnes and I hope to do well, as do Larry Nabholz and Bob Stupples, the Chicago pros, and the three American amateurs, Josh Crane, Charlie McHugh and Douglas Grant.

I believe the most we have to worry about in the way of British competition will be the golf of Archie Compston, Art Havers and Abe Mitchell.

We all play one qualifying round of 18 holes today and another tomorrow. Bill Mehlhorn and I were pleased to find ourselves paired, as we know each other's game.

Bill Mehlhorn is determined to win. He has been working exceedingly hard in practice, shooting a 69 yesterday and a 70 the day before. Two rounds like that would make Bill a likely winner of the qualifying medal.

Walter Hagen's golf has improved since his defeat at Moor Park, as was to be expected. Tommy Armour's iron shots have excited admiration in everyone who has seen them.

PROPOSE HEAVY FORFEITS TO INSURE BOUT

New York, May 7. (U.P.)—The possibility that a last minute switch might substitute some other heavyweight as Gene Tunney's next opponent has led John Mortimer, Tom Heeney's English manager, to propose $25,000 forfeits for both principals. Mortimer will ask the state athletic commission to accept a $25,000 check on Heeney's behalf tomorrow and will demand a similar forfeit from the champion.

Articles for the fight have not been signed.

By United Press
Yesterday's Hero—Bubbles Hargrave of the Cincinnati Reds. Pinch-hitting for Curtis Walker in the tenth, Hargrave singled with the bases allied, scoring Hughie Critz with the run by which the Reds beat the New York Giants, 4 to 3.

The Brooklyn Robins divided a double header with the St. Louis Cardinals, thereby dropping to third place in the National league race. Grover Cleveland Alexander outpitched Dazzy Vance and the Cards won the first game 4 to 2. The Robins came from behind to win the second game, 5 to 4, a home run by Babe Herman with a runner on base providing the winning punch in the eighth.

The Chicago Cubs nosed out the Philadelphia Phillies, 5 to 4, in 11 innings. Hack Wilson's sacrifice fly scored Beck with the winning run. Pat Malone replaced Sheriff Blake in the seventh and held the Phils to two hits and one run in the next five innings, fanning eight men.

The crew of the Bremen—Major Fitzmaurice, Baron von Huenefeld and Captain Koehl—were among the crowd of 60,000 which saw the Yankees take the third straight from the White Sox, 4 to 2. Home runs by Lou Gehrig and Joe Dugan accounted for the Yankees' run.

Sam Gray won his sixth game of the season for the St. Louis Browns over the Washington Senators, 7 to 6, in 11 innings. Gray helped win his own game by sending Schang, who had walked from first to third on a single in the seventh, Wally scored on a sacrifice by O'Rourke.

Buddy Myer was the only member of the Boston Red Sox who could fathom Haskell Billings' delivery and the Detroit Tigers triumphed, 3 to 0. Myer's two singles were the only hits made off Billings.

The Pirates, Braves, Athletics and Indians were not scheduled.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY
UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

It looks as though the British had their best chance in some years to regain their own open golf championship which commences today at Sandwich, England.

Once in a decade or so a native and not otherwise naturalized Briton wins this most valued of golfing prizes. Arthur Havers was the last to do so, breaking a succession of American triumphs, and he was hailed at once as the St. George of the links.

Aside from Havers, the winners of recent championships have been Americans, naturalized or otherwise. Jack Hutchinson and Jim Barnes were originally from the old country, but had developed their winning golf in the United States before returning to take the title. Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones, two-timers in title-taking, are home bred beyond dispute.

There will be two days of qualifying to weed out the big field which entered the quest of the trophy this year. Half the contestants paired off and played a qualifying round on the Royal St. George's course today, while the remainder played the Prince's course nearby. Tomorrow the process will be reversed.

The American contestants this year include Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Bill Mehlhorn, Jim Barnes and Tommy Armour. This is a mighty strong threat, even if the invaders haven't Bobby Jones, who won in the past two championships, to show the way.

But somehow the feeling persists that this is Britain's year. There is a tall, tousled-haired young professional named Archie Compston who recently gave Walter Hagen the trimming of that self-satisfied gentleman's life. Compston, if he shoots the golf at Sandwich that he showed at Moor Park, has a good chance to win.

There was a time when "even fours" were considered good enough to win any open championship. After two worrisome qualifying rounds, it was estimated that any golfer who could go out and equal par over the 72-hole stretch in the face of tournament conditions, crowds and competition, was entitled to the cup.

Bobby Jones set a new mark for the boys to shoot at when he did his 285 at St. Andrews last year. The Atlantan did this under extreme difficulties, with an excited gallery whooping and charging at his heels. There are two holes at St. Andrews which have conflicting fairways, and at one time Bobby had to wait half an hour between shots while the incompetent marshals struggled with the unruly galleries. Yet Bobby hung up a 285 in winning the championship for the second year in succession, and then stepped aside to give the others a chance to show what they could do.

Compston proved at Moor Park that he can beat par over a considerable stretch of terrain under championship conditions. In his match with Hagen for the unofficial "match play championship of the world" and $3,750 on the side, Archie shot a 66 and a 67 and then eased up and took 70 for his third round. Sandwich will be more difficult than Moor Park, but a few rounds like that would find Compston so far out in front that he could be declared open champion by acclamation.

WILD BILL MEHLHORN LEADS AT SANDWICH

SANDY-HAIRED NOMAD OF THE AMERICAN LINKS

SHOOT A 72 OVER THE DIFFICULT ST. GEORGE'S COURSE

MEHLHORN HAD EIGHT ONE-PUTT GREENS IN THE PLAY

By ROBERT C. DOWSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Sandwich, Eng., May 7.—Wild Bill Mehlhorn, sandy-haired nomad of the American links, took the lead among the early finishers in the first qualifying round of the British Open Golf championship today, with a 72 over the difficult St. George's course.

Continuing to shoot the magnificent golf which had characterized his practice rounds last week, Mehlhorn had eight one-putt greens.

"Bill played miraculously," said little Gene Sarazen, former American Open champion, who has partnered with Mehlhorn, and who took a 77 for the round.

Mehlhorn's 72 was equalled by Len Holland of England, while Geo. Duncan, the "Black Scot," was a stroke behind with 73. Joe Jurado, the little Argentine, who is considered likely to finish among the leaders, had a 75 over the Prince's course.

There 263 starters over the two courses at Sandwich today, half playing St. George's and the others Prince's.

John McHugh, amateur golfer from the Olympic Club of San Francisco, played the Prince's course and turned a card of 77.

The weather was clear, with a strong wind blowing in across the sand dunes from the bay.

The veteran Harry Vardon, five times winner of the British Open, turned in an 84 for his round. Vardon won the title here in 1899 and again in 1911.

Silas Newton, an added American starter, shot a 93.

Joshua Crane, another American amateur, turned in a 91.

By GENE SARAZEN
(Former Open Champion of the United States)

(Copyright, 1928, by United Press) Sandwich, Eng., May 7.—Although we are but a hopeful handful among more than 250 splendid British and European golfers, I cannot help feeling, as we start out today to qualify for the British Open championship, that one of our number has an excellent chance to win the title now held by Bobby Jones.

Walter Hagen, Bill Mehlhorn and Tommy Armour have been shooting such brilliant golf since the weather improved that you may find the eventual winner in that trio. Jim Barnes and I hope to do well, as do Larry Nabholz and Bob Stuppel, the Chicago pros, and the three American amateurs, Josh Crane, Charlie McHugh and Douglas Grant.

I believe the most we have to worry about in the way of British competition will be the golf of Archie Compston, Art Havers and Abe Mitchell.

We all play one qualifying round of 18 holes today and another tomorrow. Bill Mehlhorn and I were pleased to find ourselves paired, as we know each other's game.

Bill Mehlhorn is determined to win. He has been working exceedingly hard in practice, shooting a 69 yesterday and a 70 the day before. Two rounds like that would make Bill a likely winner of the qualifying medal.

Walter Hagen's golf has improved since his defeat at Moor Park, as was to be expected. Tommy Armour's iron shots have excited admiration in everyone who has seen them.

PROPOSE HEAVY FORFEITS TO INSURE BOUT

New York, May 7.—(U.P.)—The possibility that a last minute switch might yet substitute some other heavyweight as Gene Tunney's next opponent has led John Mortimer, Tom Henney's English manager, to propose $25,000 forfeits for both principals. Mortimer will ask the state athletic commission to accept a $25,000 check on Henney's behalf tomorrow and will demand a similar forfeit from the champion.

Articles for the fight have not been signed.

Watching the Scoreboard

By United Press
Yesterday's Hero—Bubbles Hargrave of the Cincinnati Reds. Pinch-hitting for Curtis Walker in the tenth, Hargrave singled with the bases filled, scoring Hughie Critz with the run by which the Reds beat the New York Giants, 4 to 3.

The Brooklyn Robins divided a double header with the St. Louis Cardinals, thereby dropping to third place in the National league race. Grover Cleveland Alexander outpitched Dazzy Vance and the Cards won the first game 4 to 2. The Robins came from behind to win the second game, 5 to 4, a home run by Babe Herman with a runner on base providing the winning punch in the eighth.

The Chicago Cubs nosed out the Philadelphia Phillies, 5 to 4, in 11 innings. Hack Wilson's sacrifice fly scored Beck with the winning run. Pat Malone replaced Sheriff Blake in the seventh and held the Phils to two hits and one run in the next five innings, fanning eight men.

The crew of the Bremen—Major Fitzmaurice, Raon von Huenefeld and Captain Knehl—were among the crowd of 60,000 which saw the Yankees take the third straight from the White Sox, 4 to 2. Home runs by Lou Gehrig and Joe Dugan accounted for the Yankees' runs.

Sam Gray won his sixth game of the season for the St. Louis Browns over the Washington Senators, 7 to 6, in 11 innings. Gray helped win his own game by sending Schang, who had walked, from first to third on a single in the eighth. Wally scored on a sacrifice by O'Rourke.

Buddy Myer was the only member of the Boston Red Sox who could fathom Haskell Billings' delivery and the Detroit Tigers triumphed, 3 to 0. Myer's two singles were the only hits made off Billings.

The Pirates, Braves, Athletics and Indians were not scheduled.

SPORTSMATTER

FRANK GETTY
UNITED PRESS SPORTS EDITOR

It looks as though the British had their best chance in some years to regain their own open golf championship which commences today at Sandwich, England.

Once in a decade or so a native and not otherwise naturalized Briton wins this most valued of golf prizes. Arthur Havers was the last to do so, breaking a succession of American triumphs, and he was hailed at once as the St. George of the links.

Aside from Havers, the winners of recent championships have been Americans, naturalized or otherwise. Jack Hutchinson and Jim Barnes were originally from the old country, but had developed their winning golf in the United States before returning to take the title. Walter Hagen and Bobby Jones, two-timers in title-taking, are home bred beyond dispute.

There will be two days of qualifying to weed out the big field which entered the quest of the trophy this year. Half the contestants paired off and played a qualifying round on the Royal St. George's course today, while the remainder played the Prince's course nearby. Tomorrow the process will be reversed.

The American contestants this year include Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Bill Mehlhorn, Jim Barnes and Tommy Armour. This is a mighty strong threat, even if the invaders haven't Bobby Jones, who won in the past two championships, to show the way.

But somehow the feeling persists that this is Britain's year. There is a tall, tousled-haired young professional named Archie Compston who recently gave Walter Hagen the trimming of that self-satisfied gentleman's life. Compston, if he shoots the golf at Sandwich that he showed at Moor Park, has a good chance to win.

There was a time when "even fours" were considered good enough to win any open championship. After two worrisome qualifying rounds, it was estimated that any golfer who could go out and equal par over the 72-hole stretch in the face of tournament conditions, crowds and competition, was entitled to the cup.

Bobby Jones set a new mark for the boys to shoot at when he did his 285 at St. Andrews last year. The Atlantic did this under extreme difficulties, with an excited gallery whooping and charging at his heels. There are two holes at St. Andrews which have conflicting fairways, and at one time Bobby had to wait half an hour between shots while the incompetent marshals struggled with the unruly galleries. Yet Bobby hung up a 285 in winning the championship for the second year in succession, and then stepped aside to give the others a chance to show what they could do.

Compston proved at Moor Park that he can beat par over a considerable stretch of terrain under championship conditions. In his match with Hagen for the unofficial "match play championship of the world" and $3,750 on the side, Archie shot a 66 and a 67 and then eased up and took 70 for his third round. Sandwich will be more difficult than Moor Park, but a few rounds like that would find Compston so far out in front that he could be declared open champion by acclamation.
